Product Description:

The Air-Cooled condenser is a cooling facility that is used in tandem with other cooling equipment. The apparatus comes in three different types which are recognized as H, V, and U. The H type is designed for side blowing, while V and U types are best suited for roof blowing.

This particular condenser has a well-designed structure and offers great versatility, making it possible to pair with an array of compressors. Its compatibility with various compressors makes it an attractive option for customers searching for an adaptable cooling solution.

The condenser also comes with window fin that can be customized to meet different customers' needs. This feature allows for greater flexibility when selecting the ideal layout for the cooling equipment.
