Product Description

Product Description:

Introduction to Air-Cooled Condenser:

An Air-Cooled Condenser is a type of heat transfer facility that is used in conjunction with cooling equipment. There are three primary types available: H, V, and W. The H type is characterized by side blowing, while the V and W types feature roof blowing. It boasts a well-designed structure, excellent interchangeability, and the capability to be paired with various types of compressors.

Features of Air-Cooled Condenser:

The condenser is available in two variations of fin types - window fin and honeycomb fin. These different fin types cater to the diverse requirements of various customers.

Applications:

Cooling Applications

- 1. Cold Storage Facilities: Air-cooled condensers are utilized for preserving food, pharmaceuticals, or chemicals in cold storage facilities.
- 2. Industrial Workshops: These condensers are used for cooling machinery or process areas in industrial settings like plastics and metalworking workshops.
